The 700-man Cambodian Army force dug in just east of Oudong continues to fend off Khmer Communist attacks. A government relief force trying to reach Oudong from the east ran into stiff resistance several miles from the town. Another relief column remained stalled north of Oudong on Route 5. The Communists are using 105-mm howitzers in the Oudong area. Refugees from Oudong estimate that the insurgents have herded off about half of the town's population of 25,000. They also stated that civilian casualties were high and that 90 percent of Oudong has been destroyed.

Government troops yesterday dislodged the remaining insurgent elements from Route 1 some 15 miles from Phnom Penh. South
